COOLIDGE POLLS TREMENDOUS POPULAR VOTE

EXCEEDS BY TWO MILLION TOTAL OF HIS OPPONENTS

COOLIDGE 15,000,000; DAVIS, 8,500,000; LA FOLLETTE 4,200,000

ELECTORAL COLLEGE COOLIDGE 379; DAVIS 139; LA FOLLETTE 13

(By United Press)
New York, Nov. 6.—On the basis of unofficial returns now almost complete, Calvin Coolidge not only will have a sweeping majority in the electoral college for president, but his popular vote will exceed by approximately 2,000,000 the combined total accredited his opponents.

The gradual completion of vote counting in distant states and outlying precincts tended today to confirm the prediction that the final standing of the candidates in the electoral college will be: Coolidge, 379; Davis, 139; LaFollette, 13. While no state has yet announced the official tabulation of its complete vote, the unofficial returns forecast the whole popular vote by candidates approximately as follows:

Coolidge, 15,000,000; Davis, 8,500,000; LaFollette, 4,200,000.

PROHIBITS WEARING OF MASKS IN PUBLIC

(By United Press)
Minneapolis, Nov. 6.—Miss Myrtle Cain, one of the first four women legislators elected in Minnesota, and who staged a spectacular anti-Klan battle in the House last session, was defeated Tuesday by Joseph M. Kozlak in the 28th district. Miss Cain aroused country-wide attention by her stand in the legislature. She fostered and secured passage of an anti-mask law, prohibiting the wearing of masks in public.

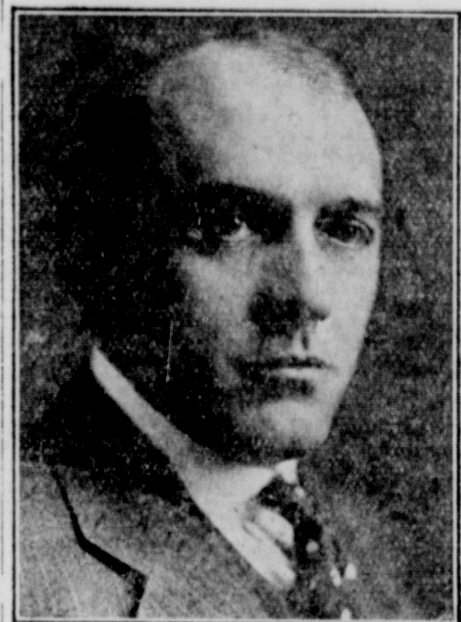

Mrs. Sue M. Dickey-Hough, another of the first four women legislators, was defeated in the 74th district by L. E. Brophy.

NEW REGIME IN WASHINGTON AFTER ELECTION

NEW LEGISLATIVE LEADERS, NEW CABINET MEMBERS MAY FOLLOW

COOLIDGE MAJORITY IN CONGRESS CANNOT BE CHALLENGED

(By United Press)
New York, Nov. 6.—The crushing blow dealt to LaFollette groups throughout the nation in the election will bring into power an entirely new regime in Washington, new legislative leaders, possibly new cabinet members and new dominating influences are to be set up to take the place of the old.

But instead of destroying the self-designated "progressive movement" of LaFollette, it will only serve to draw its lines more clearly and his groups will endeavor to set themselves up as the opposition "party" to the administration, in the hope that four years from now they will be able to solidify most of the opposition to the republicans.

A new movement that polls 5,000,000 votes must be reckoned with, political leaders feel.

The majority held by President Coolidge in Congress, however, cannot be seriously challenged, early tabulations of the outcome showed today. LaFollette even lost his balance of power and his strength was diminished. His right-hand man, Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, appears to have been defeated by his democratic opponent, Daniel F. Steck, whose victory was wrought by Coolidge republicans who voted the democratic ticket rather than vote for a LaFollette sympathizer.

In Massachusetts Senator David I. Walsh, democrat, who is most often listed as a progressive, went down to defeat before Frederic H. Gillette, who so closely coincides with the Coolidge opinion that he is now being talked of as the new leader of the senate.

In Minnesota, Senator Magnus Johnson, another LaFollette adherent, although a farmer-laborite, went down to defeat before a republican.

ELECTION ON NOV. 4 FOR FIFTH TIME

(By United Press)
New York, Nov. 6.—For the fifth time in the history of the United States, the general elections fell this year on November 4.

The elections were held on the same day of the month in 1800, 1828, 1856 and 1884. In each instance the result was the election of a democrat—Jefferson, Jackson, Buchanan and Cleveland in order. Jefferson was elected by the so-called republican party of that day, but the democrats claim that the republican party of 1800 is the democratic party of today.

SENATOR LODGE REPORTED DYING IN CAMBRIDGE

SENIOR SENATOR OF MASSACHUSETTS SICK IN HOSPITAL

SUFFERED PARALYTIC STROKE AT NOON YESTERDAY

(By United Press)
Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 6.—Henry Cabot Lodge, 74, senior senator from Massachusetts, is dying here at Charlesgate Hospital.

Senator Lodge suffered a paralytic stroke at noon yesterday and has been unconscious ever since, with death expected momentarily.

Dr. John H. Cunningham, attending physician, said the senator was sinking rapidly and that his condition was "very grave."

Members of the family were called and remained at the bedside through the night. Dr. Cunningham said the stroke suffered by Lodge was similar to that which caused President Wilson's death and that little could be done in a medical way for him.

Lodge has been in the hospital since October 20 when he underwent an operation for gallstones. He was considered on the way to recovery when he suffered the stroke.

Senator Lodge had not regained consciousness at 8 a. m. today. The stroke ruptured a blood vessel in the brain, according to Dr. Cunningham, who said the senator could not live throughout the day.

At 2 o'clock Dr. Cunningham in an informal talk with newspaper men stated that Senator Lodge's condition was unchanged. He added that the distinguished patient might remain in his present condition for days.

An official bulletin will be issued at 6 p. m.

MRS. HARDING GAINS IN STRENGTH

(By United Press)
Marion, O., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Warren G. Harding, ill here at White Oak Farm, appears to be gaining strength and is now believed to be well past immediate danger, Dr. Carl Sawyer's statement said today.

"Mrs. Harding rested most of the night after the fatigue of yesterday, due to the election," the statement said. "She is improved this morning."

"The complications that have developed are subsiding slowly."

Dr. Sawyer expressed the belief that the result of Tuesday's election had a favorable effect on Mrs. Harding's condition.

"She was deeply interested and very much pleased with President Coolidge's victory," Dr. Sawyer said.

CLOSE RACE FOR SENATORSHIP

MAGNUS JOHNSON CUTTING DOWN LEAD OF SCHALL

(By United Press)

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Farmer-laborites and Republicans are running a close race for the United States senatorship from Minnesota. Thomas D. Schall Republican candidate, was in the lead this morning slightly less than 18,000 votes with 777 precincts to hear from. The vote for Magnus Johnson, incumbent farmer-laborite, stood at 323,032 and for Schall 340,919, a plurality of 17,887 for the Republican candidate. Farrell, Democrat, was trailing a bad third.

Republicans admit Johnson may cut down Schall's lead in the precincts yet to be heard from, but claim the latter's election by a narrower margin than the vote he holds now.

SCHALL'S PLURALITY NOW SET AT 20,000

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Thomas D. Schall was moved up from congress to the United States senate by Minnesota voters Tuesday after he had conducted a campaign more vigorous than either of his opponents, despite the handicap of blindness. Schall covered nearly every county in the state, speaking some times as much as three times a day.

He won the senate seat occupied for a short time by Magnus Johnson, Kimball farmer, by a plurality of around 20,000, latest figures with only 646 precincts to be heard from out of 3,607 in the state giving Schall 354,387 and Johnson 331,368, a lead for Schall of 23,197.

Theodore Christianson's lead over Floyd B. Olson was maintained and probably will be between 40,000 and 45,000, returns indicated.

The vote in 2,905 precincts was Christianson, 349,168, and Olson, 305,679.

Gov. Bryan Telegraphs To General Dawes

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 6.—Gov. Charles W. Bryan telegraphed his congratulations to Gen. Charles G. Dawes, his republican opponent for vice president at his home in Evanston, Ill., yesterday. The telegram read:

(By United Press)
Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 6.—In one of the most hotly contested elections in the history of Iowa, Senator Smith W. Brookhart defeated Daniel Steck, his democratic opponent, by a majority of 320, according to complete but unofficial tabulations.

Brookhart made a substantial gain in Polk county, where an official check added 246 votes to the majority reported for him in the county earlier in the count today.

An official canvass of the vote in all counties probably will be required before accurate returns are known. Other counties are reporting discrepancies. The vote now stands: Brookhart, 455,749; Steck, 455,449.

RETURNS CUT DOWN N. D. LEAD

LA FOLLETTE REPORTED GAINING ON COOLIDGE IN STATE

(By United Press)

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 6.—With returns from the Trans-Missouri territory, cutting down the lead piled up by President Coolidge in the eastern section of North Dakota, both parties here claimed the electoral vote for their respective candidates.

In 1,571 of 2,160 precincts of the state the vote stood, Coolidge, 79,316; LaFollette, 67,363; Davis, 13,603.

L. B. Hanns, Coolidge campaign manager, while admitting the president's plurality will be cut down, claimed the state for the republican candidate by 4,000.

Arthur G. Sorlie, non-partisan for governor, defeated Halvor L. Halvorsen, democrat, for governor.

PRESIDENTIAL VOTE IN STATE

(By United Press)

500,000 YEARS OF MAN SHOWN BY SPECIMENS

WISCONSIN COLLEGE HAS REMARKABLE COLLECTION OF HANDIWORK OF MAN

PIECES OF BONE, METAL, WOOD AND IVORY FROM EVERY PERIOD IN HISTORY

(By United Press)
Beloit, Wis., Nov. 6.—A collection of specimens of the handiwork of man from the time of the bronze age, 8,000 to 10,000 years ago, way back to the time when man first emerged from the animal state, some 500,000 years ago, have been brought from Europe by Alonzo Pond, Beloit college graduate, and added to the collection at the Logan museum, making this museum the most important one in the United States in its material on the early stages of man, especially the stone age.

Pieces of bone, metal, wood and ivory from every period in history of man are in the collection and will be used by the college in its courses. With the new material collected by Pond in France, England, Switzerland and Denmark during the past summer, and representing a heavy outlay in money Beloit college is perhaps better equipped to teach the development of man than any other school in the United States.

Beloit college, because of this collection, may be the meeting place in the future of some of the most noted students of prehistoric man in the country, who, rather than go to Europe, will come to this institution. Pond, who has had much experience in paleontology prior to this visit, sailed from New York on May 24 and returned home recently. Many of the specimens are already in the museum while more are still to come.

Necklace 75,000 Years Old

Among the most valuable of the specimens is a necklace, of 137 pieces of ivory, bone and stone made in the aurignacian period, 75,000 years ago. In the rest of the world, there are but 120 such beads, and two of the pieces of the necklace here are absolutely unique in the world—an ivory fish and two pendants.

From a scientific standpoint the most important pieces brought back by Pond are the 36 carvings on stone belonging to the magdalenian period, some 30,000 or more years ago. These are the only ones of this kind in America, and were found in a cave at Limeuil, in the southern part of France. They are small slabs of stone on which are drawn crude outlines of animals and from the condition of the stone and from evidence in the cave itself, it has been deduced that there was once an "art class" in this cave. The pictures are drawn on the walls of the cave, but on separate pieces of stone.

The specimens of the earliest stage of man obtained by Pond are 500,000 years old, the period when man was just beginning to acquire reasoning power, distinguishing him from the (Continued on page 5)

CLAIMS POLLING TUESDAY CLOSE TO 5,000,000

POPULAR VOTE GREATER THAN ROOSEVELT'S IN 1912

ROOSEVELT WON SIX STATE, LA-FOLLETTE BUT ONE

(By United Press)

New York, Nov. 6.—Announcement of Senator LaFollette that the independent movement must "carry on, coupled with the fact that he is expected on the face of incomplete tabulations to have polled between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 votes Tuesday, has led to conjecture about the potentialities of a third party which may be evolved under LaFollette's leadership. The Wisconsin colon, according to virtually complete returns, polled a greater popular vote than Theodore Roosevelt in the historic three-cornered fight of 1912. The colon won six states then, whereas LaFollette has won but one. Nevertheless LaFollette ran second in eleven states and in three of these that Roosevelt won—California, Minnesota and South Dakota—LaFollette polled a slightly greater vote than Roosevelt did.

Their relative popular vote in these states was as follows: California, Roosevelt 283,610, LaFollette 426,000; Minnesota, Roosevelt, 125,856, LaFollette 290,000; South Dakota, Roosevelt 58,811, LaFollette 67,000.

In the other three states that Roosevelt carried in 1912 and in all but one of which—Pennsylvania—LaFollette ran second this year, their relative polls were as follows: Michigan, Roosevelt 214,583, LaFollette 105,000; Pennsylvania, Roosevelt 447,426, LaFollette 270,000; Washington, Roosevelt 113,698, LaFollette 106,000.

In seven states not mentioned above in which LaFollette ran second—Idaho, Iowa, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon and Wyoming—LaFollette polled a considerably larger popular vote in each than did Woodrow Wilson in 1912 when Wilson carried them all. In North Dakota he polled a greater vote this year than the total of Wilson and Roosevelt in 1912.

In addition the popular vote scored by LaFollette this year was greater than that of any of the three candidates in 1912 in Arizona, was close to Wilson's vote that year in Ohio when the latter carried the state, and was almost as great in Wisconsin as the combined vote of the three candidates in 1912.

Of course, 1912 isn't 1924, and the vote then was vastly less than the vote polled yesterday, but as political leaders view it, there is something to think about in the relative strength of LaFollette and the leaders this year.

WILSON AGAIN CHIEF JUSTICE

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Chief Justice Samuel B. Wilson of Mankato was returned to the Supreme Court as chief justice by a plurality which may reach 30,000. The vote in 2,323 precincts out of 3,607 in the state gave Wilson, 218,144; Albert Johnson, 188,376.

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—With 600 precincts out of 3,607 in the state yet to be heard from, the vote for presidential candidates stood: Coolidge, 384,621; LaFollette, 303,117.

In the race for senator Schall was leading Johnson, his farmer-labor opponent, by 20,000 votes.

New Gown Appears

London, Nov. 6.—Guests at dinner dance here were startled by the appearance of a young society woman wearing a bizarre creation which she called "the northern lights gown." On a background of white silk, beads were embroidered in "aurora arches" of bright blue, deep red, vivid yellow and green. Now several similar models are being worn at fashionable gatherings.

CLAIMS POLLING

TO 5,000,000

POPULAR VOTE GREATER THAN ROOSEVELT'S IN 1912

ROOSEVELT WON SIX STATE, LA-FOLLETTE BUT ONE

(By United Press)

New York, Nov. 6.—Announcement of Senator LaFollette that the independent movement must "carry on, coupled with the fact that he is expected on the face of incomplete tabulations to have polled between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 votes, Tuesday, has led to conjecture about the potentialities of a third party which may be evolved under LaFollette's leadership.

The Wisconsin colon, according to virtually complete returns, polled a greater popular vote than Theodore Roosevelt in the historic three-cornered fight of 1912. The colon won six states then, whereas LaFollette has won but one. Nevertheless LaFollette ran second in eleven states and in three of these that Roosevelt won—California, Minnesota and South Dakota—LaFollette polled a slightly greater vote than Roosevelt did.

Their relative popular vote in these states was as follows: California, Roosevelt 283,610, LaFollette 426,000; Minnesota, Roosevelt 125,856, LaFollette 290,000; South Dakota, Roosevelt 58,811, LaFollette 67,000.

In the other three states that Roosevelt carried in 1912 and in all but one of which—Pennsylvania—LaFollette ran second this year, their relative polls were as follows: Michigan, Roosevelt 214,583, LaFollette 105,000; Pennsylvania, Roosevelt 447,426, LaFollette 270,000; Washington, Roosevelt 113,698, LaFollette 106,000.

In seven states not mentioned above in which LaFollette ran second—Idaho, Iowa, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon and Wyoming—LaFollette polled a considerably larger popular vote in each than did Woodrow Wilson in 1912 when Wilson carried them all. In North Dakota he polled a greater vote this year than the total of Wilson and Roosevelt in 1912.

In addition the popular vote scored by LaFollette this year was greater than that of any of the three candidates in 1912 in Arizona, was close to Wilson's vote that year in Ohio when the latter carried the state, and was almost as great in Wisconsin as the combined vote of the three candidates in 1912.

Of course, 1912 isn't 1924, and the vote then was vastly less than the vote polled yesterday, but as political leaders view it, there is something to think about in the relative strength of LaFollette and the leaders this year.

WILSON AGAIN
CHIEF JUSTICE

(By United Press)

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Chief Justice Samuel B. Wilson of Mankato was returned to the Supreme Court as chief justice by a plurality which may reach 30,000. The vote in 2,323 precincts out of 3,607 in the state gave Wilson, 218,144; Albert Johnson, 188,376.

WISCONSIN COLLEGE HAS RE-MARKABLE COLLECTION OF

PIECES OF BONE, METAL, WOOD AND IVORY FROM EVERY PERIOD IN HISTORY

(By United Press)

Beloit, Wis., Nov. 6.—A collection of specimens of the handiwork of man from the time of the bronze age, 8,000 to 10,000 years ago, way back to the time when man first emerged from the animal state, some 500,000 years ago, have been brought from Europe by Alonzo Pond, Beloit college graduate, and added to the collections at the Logan museum, making this museum the most important one in the United States in its material on the early stages of man, especially the stone age.

Pieces of bone, metal, wood and ivory from every period in history of man are in the collection and will be used by the college in its courses. With the new material collected by Pond in France, England, Switzerland and Denmark during the past summer, and representing a heavy outlay in money Beloit college is perhaps better equipped to teach the development of man than any other school in the United States.

Beloit college, because of this collection, may be the meeting place in the future of some of the most noted students of prehistoric man in the country, who, rather than go to Europe, will come to this institution. Pond, who has had much experience in paleontology prior to this visit, sailed from New York on May 24 and returned home recently. Many of the specimens are already in the museum while more are still to come.

Necklace 75,000 Years Old

Among the most valuable of the specimens is a necklace, of 137 pieces of ivory, bone and stone made in the aurignacien period, 75,000 years ago. In the rest of the world, there are but 120 such beads, and two of the pieces of the necklace here are absolutely unique in the world—an ivory fish and two pendants.

From a scientific standpoint the most important pieces brought back by Pond are the 36 carvings on stone belonging to the magdalenian period, some 30,000 or more years ago. These are the only ones of this kind in America, and were found in a cave at Limeuil, in the southern part of France. They are small slabs of stone on which are drawn crude outlines of animals and from the condition of the stone and from evidence in the cave itself, it has been deduced that there was once an "art class" in this cave. The pictures are drawn on the walls of the cave, but on separate pieces of stone.

The specimens of the earliest stage of man obtained by Pond are 500,000 years old, the period when man was just beginning to acquire reasoning power, distinguishing him from the

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Menthosulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Menthosulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar of Rowles Menthosulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.—Adv't.

ANCIENT RELICS TO BELONG TO MUSEUM

Fine Archeological Collection for Houston, Texas.

One of the largest and most interesting archeological collections in the Southwest is that of Prof. W. F. Cummins, oil geologist for the Southern Pacific railroad. Professor Cummins has announced his intention of presenting this wonderful collection of ancient relics to the Houston museum. It consists of several hundred stone and clay images which he found in the Maya ruins in Yucatan, Mexico, and many strange objects which he unearthed in exploring prehistoric mounds in Missouri.

One specimen is a sacred image carved in stone, found nearly forty years ago in a Missouri mound, pronounced by expert geologists of the government not only genuine, but the finest specimen ever found from the mounds and cumuli of the prehistoric civilized race of the United States, probably thousands of years old. Professor Cummins refused an offer of $5,000 for it, or for a cast of it, from a government scientific institution. But he kept it as the only one of its kind for presentation to the Houston museum.

The workmanship of this stone image is perfect, requiring high artistic skill in conception and execution, indicating that an advanced degree of civilization had been reached, as well as a knowledge of species of animals that have not existed for thousands of years on this continent.

The image has the beak of an eagle, the horn of a rhinoceros, the feet of an elephant, the shell of a tortoise, the flippers of a seal and the tail of a Gila monster, also the wings of a grasshopper or locust. It is stained with a brown pigment of some unknown substance, and when discovered was incased in red clay. It is carved from a fine-grained hard white limestone, is 38 inches long and weighs 68 pounds. When found a small creek had cut away part of the mound, leaving some of the image exposed. It has been in Professor Cummins' possession since 1885.

As the ancients of central Asia had the tradition of the Noachian deluge, destroying the most of the world, so also the ancient American races had a similar tradition. Having suffered from great destruction of vegetation in what are now some of the western states, their tradition was that the world was destroyed by swarms of grasshoppers. This image commemorates the destruction of the world by grasshoppers, according to Professor Cummins.

The Worry Killer

"Don't worry," says the doctor and "don't worry," says the friend, but "how can I stop worrying," says the worried one. "When I have so much to worry about?" Recreation offers the means, says one who knows. Every man should have a hobby or two to divert his mind and relax the tension of business and other cares.

Chumney Depew took up speech-making as a hobby. In order to prepare and deliver his after-dinner speeches, he was compelled to completely forget his duties as railroad president. He is more than ninety years old now and is still serving the New York Central railroad. Gardening, music, reading, art and a thousand other things offer opportunities for persons to forget their troubles. Play is the best kind of exercise and calisthenics will help. Keep busy and do not eat too much.

A Book Ledger

I got my most definite literary stimulus from my father, who continually managed to inculcate in me an interest in good books. On my last visit home I found put away in a safety deposit box a ledger which shows he presented it to me on my eleventh birthday, and in which he had written the request that I should note the name of every book I read and with a brief review tell the impression it made on me. I faithfully kept up that record until I was through college. As I looked over it the other day, re-reading the boyish scrawls on the earlier pages, I found in an elaborate discussion of "Scottish Chiefs" the beginning of a taste, literary or otherwise—but anyway for reading—that has still endured.—Will H. Hays, in Hearst's International.

His Walk in Life

Worried Mother—I'm sure I don't know what we'll ever do with Harold when he grows up, John. Did you ever see such impossibly long legs?

"Don't worry, my dear. Perhaps we can let him out to realtors to prove that their houses are within easy walking distance of the station."—Life.

Not That Kind

"I fancy you are a typical Arkansan, don't you know?" said the spectacled tourist.

"Wall, any by-gosh time you figger that I'm typical," grimly replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, "you just try to tip me over and—ptu—find out."—Kansas City Star.

First Aid

"What did you do when Bluebelle fainted from the heat?"

"Rushed her into a drug store for first aid."

"Did that help her?"

"Oh, yes. The soda clerk fixed her up a nice ice cream sundae."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Scene from "The BREATHLESS MOMENT"
A UNIVERSAL ATTRACTION With Wm. DESMOND

Desmond Comes to the Rialto in New Role

William Desmond and Robert Hill, Universal star and director, respectively, have worked together in many screen plays, but they both admit that the most pleasure they ever got out of picture making occurred during the filming of "The Breathless Moment," Desmond's latest, starring Desmond, Hill's director.

The play is a crook drama with a distinct comedy angle. Both Desmond and Hill are veterans of the vaudeville stage and they had a great time evolving "gags" for the production. Often during the shooting of some of the scenes in the picture Hill would shout, "Cut," and burst out in a loud guffaw of laughter. He had thought up some new "laugh," and it would be immediately written into the working script.

Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix in the Paramount Picture "Sinners in Heaven" An Alan Crosland Production

"Sinners in Heaven" Glorifies South Sea Island Dancing Girls

When "Sinners in Heaven," the new Paramount picture with Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix, is flashed on the local screen at the New Park tonight and Friday motion picture patrons will have an opportunity of comparing American methods in the terpsichorean art with those that are most favored in the Bahama Islands. Those who have been privileged to get an advance look at the picture predict that it will do as much to glorify the native girls of the Bahamas as Florenz Ziegfeld has done for the American girl in his Follies.

All of which is due to Alan Crosland, the director of the photoplay. He picked out twenty-four native beauties in Nassau, where the company made its headquarters while filming the exterior scenes for the picture on eight of the islands, and in "Sinners in Heaven."

"Movie" Ship Bumps Into 2 Big Whales

Frank Lloyd had an unusual experience while filming an important sea battle between a Moorish galleon and an English frigate off the Santa Catalina coast for his production of "The Sea Hawk," the big First National drama coming to the New Park soon.

There are whales in the Pacific not far from the Catalina shores, and although Mr. Lloyd was too busy filming "The Sea Hawk" to be interested in even such big fish he had instructed them in a native dance.

The troupe was known as "Crosland's Follies" among the picture people, and every night at the hotel Crosland would put his "Tiller Girls of the Bahamas" through their steps for the entertainment of the guests. The affair got to be the talk of Nassau and when the troupe was scheduled to do the dance before the camera, citizens of the town journeyed to the island on which the company was working to see the finished product.

"Gilda Gray with all her movements has nothing on these native girls," said the Paramount director. "They got so proficient in the so-called art of south-sea dancing that I had to break up their rhythm so the dance would not look as if it were a product of Broadway."

The religious festival of the natives at which these girls did their dance is one of the interesting scenes picture on eight of the islands, and in "Sinners in Heaven."

his experience with them just the same.

In one of the big scenes of the picture a Moorish galleon rams an English frigate. To avoid sinking both ships they had to be maneuvered with considerable care. Starting toward each other at an angle would permit them striking without injury to any of the several hundred people aboard.

ODD CASE OF JEALOUSY

ONE of the oddest cases of jealousy ever recorded is found in the records of a suit for divorce filed in Newark, N. J. The rift in family affairs of Elias Cowan, according to testimony brought out, occurred from the fact that within 20 years Mrs. Cowan made more than $200,000, while the husband's earning capacity never advanced far over $40 per week.

He left her, she alleges, after several years in which he would not speak to her or her son. When they were married, Cowan was a tailor and earning $13 a week. This was not enough money to pay home expenses of two people and so Mrs. Cowan took in dressmaking. She was an energetic woman, business like too, and in a short time she was earning $50 a week and her husband had advanced to $20 a week.

About this time Cowan became jealous, not of his wife's beauty or practical spirit, but because she was earning more money than he was and so, in no uncertain way, was showing her superiority in contributing to the family exchequer. Then came the oddest chapter in the marital experiences of this pair. Cowan asked her pointblank to quit making more than he did, and she retorted that both could not live on the $20 which Cowan was making.

Soon Mrs. Cowan's dressmaking business prospered so that she hired four assistants and she sent her son to University. Then Mrs. Cowan branched into real estate and just coined money, for she was just as shrewd dealing in real estate as she had been in her dressmaking venture.

Her continued success only aroused the ire of her "better half." Every fresh speculation in real estate which redounded to the credit of Mrs. Cowan, only made Mr. Cowan the more heated. After she bought the apartment houses and made them yield handsome returns, Cowan became so angered he would not speak to his wife.

She sold one of her houses and to reconcile Cowan she gave him $10,000, it is alleged. Then he quit work and has not been living with her since. And so there stands revealed to the world one of the oddest chapters in matrimonial history ever recorded on the legal pages of an affair of the heart and home.

EXPRESSING HIS THANKS

ONE of the first things President Coolidge did after his election was assured was to thank the voters. It was a simple statement and was embodied in these words:

"It does not seem possible to me to make an adequate expression concerning the presidency of the United States. No other honor equals it; no other responsibility approaches it. When it is conferred by an overwhelming choice of the American people and vote of the electoral college, these are made all the greater.

"I can only express my simple thanks to all those who have contributed to this result, and plainly acknowledge that it has been brought to pass through the work of a Divine Providence, of which I am but one instrument. Such powers as I have I dedicate to the service of all my country and of all my countrymen.

"In the performance of the duties of my office I cannot ask for anything more than the sympathetic consideration which my fellow Americans have always bestowed upon me. I have no appeal except to the common sense of all the people. I have no pledge except to serve them. I have no object except to promote their welfare."

WOMEN IN POLITICS

Two women governors and at least one congresswoman were elected. Mrs. Ferguson of Texas succeeded her husband as governor and Mrs. Ross succeeded her husband, in like manner, in Wyoming. "Ma" Ferguson has pledged herself to promote the cause of education from the rural schools to the university. Mrs. Ross revealed the canny instincts of a true politician. She refused to issue any flamboyant statements regarding her victory. She wants to be certain of election before she makes any kind of a statement.

In the east Mrs. Norton, who is the wife of a Jersey City business man, was elected to congress on a "light wines and beer" platform. By the way, this kind of a platform fell flat in Minnesota where a candidate for senate on such platform never even got started, polling but a handful of votes.

A TREMENDOUS vote was polled in the national election and shows that the campaign to get people out to vote was successful. In this, the women are assured a large part in attaining the end desired. The women of Minnesota were especially intense in their desires and appeals to get men and women to the polling places.

The farmer who shot down a little band of children celebrating Halloween with pranks now faces a charge of third degree murder.

LA FOLLETTE, who started out to carry the West, brought home only the electors of one state, his home commonwealth of Wisconsin.

PEOPLE did not take kindly to the state amendment for a public elevator and it appears to have lost in the tide of ballots.

SOCIETY girls of an election precinct in St. Paul face charges, as it is asserted that tallying was started before the polls closed.

If there's a time when an adding machine demonstrates its worth, it's when the election returns come pouring in.

THERE is a chilly touch in the air, and snow flurries seem imminent. It all makes good weather for shooting ducks.

As returns come in, Congressman Harold Knutson is increasing his lead over his competitor, S. C. Shipstead.

WINNIPEG is reported blanketed with four inches of snow.

Here's Graphic Story
of Boudoir Tragedy

The room was in a state of fearful disorder. Cupboards had been opened and their contents scattered here and there in the utmost confusion, says London Answers. Dresses and coats had been torn from their hooks and lay in crumpled heaps on the floor. Everywhere chaos reigned.

At first sight the room appeared empty, but through the gloom in one far corner a figure was discernible—the figure of a woman.

There she crouched, despair writ large on her beautiful face, the light of agony in her eyes. Her long black hair streamed loose over her shoulders and her face was flushed. Her whole attitude was that of a woman driven to desperation, of one who had received some dreadful injury and knew not which way to turn.

At last anger got the better of her. She drew herself erect with a gesture of indignation. Stretching her arms out she cried aloud:

"I cannot stand any more! It is already too much! I was so proud of you, and you have repaid my pride with torture!"

"You were the envy of all my friends and I gloried in their envy. Every glance that was cast at you filled me with an inward glow. But you are not what I thought you. What have you done? You have tortured me until I cried out in agony, and still for your beauty I love you."

She broke off, her breast rising and falling with the stress of her emotions. Her breath came in short, quick gasps. She rocked herself to and fro as she moaned in agony.

Suddenly there was a knock at the door.

"It is time!" said a voice from without.

The words seemed to spur the woman to action.

"Yes," she replied hysterically, "it is time. I have loved you in spite of everything. But now—now I will end it forever. I will cast you off!"

And with an imperious gesture she ripped the little dancing shoe from her foot and flung it from her.

It was lovely—but a size too small.

Views Women as Pictures

Some women came to my house to dinner the other day, and began abusing the men. They said: "Present company excepted," but I begged them to enjoy themselves, and include me. Every little while I said something to further provoke them, and they finally did their best.

"Ladies," I said, "you have no idea how ashamed I am of my sex."

I told them of a man I know, married three times, who solemnly declares he never in his life proposed marriage to any woman.

"I can easily believe the story," I added; "I never did."

I have heard it said of a great painting: "Don't get too close to it." In order to get the best out of a picture, view it in the proper light, and from a distance; don't crowd up, and get so close a look that you realize the rough way in which it was made.

Same way with women (I said to them).

"I prefer to view them from a distance; never closer than four or five feet."

Left Them Gasping

When Blanche Sweet was in England in connection with the production of "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," she met by chance, one day in London, a woman friend of long acquaintance, from home. The friend was a staunch teetotaler and an ardent advocate of prohibition for all and sundry. Judge then of her disgust when her prize Peke darted through the swing doors of a "pub" she was passing and disappeared from view.

Both women called and coaxed, but doggie would not respond. For either of them to venture inside was, of course, unthinkable, and, eventually, Miss Sweet's friend appealed to a passerby, obviously, a laborer.

"Would you kindly fetch my little dog out of that public-house, please?"

"Sittingly, lady, sittingly; er—which bar was you in?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Spreading the Scriptures

If the present rate of distribution of the Bible is maintained the whole world may be supplied before the end of the century, says the New York Times. A high-water mark was reached last year, according to recent reports, when 30,000,000 copies of the Scriptures found their way into parts of all lands.

Of last year's total about one-fourth was the output of the American Bible society, an organization that since its birth 108 years ago has issued almost 100,000,000 volumes of Scriptures. For the second time in its history the society last year exceeded the 7,000,000-copy mark, an increase of 2,500,000 over the previous year.

Lawyer's Clients Defined

A group of lawyers was conversing on divorce subjects recently in one of the corridors of the courthouse. They were joined by a young member of the profession who was bitterly denouncing the stupidity of his client who had just been cross-examined on the witness stand, and had become hopelessly confused by the opposition.

"Why, the darn fool," the young man began, but was stopped by Henry Spaan, one of the attorneys in the group, who said:

"Young man, did you ever stop to think that were it not for the darn fools, we lawyers would be without means of support?"—Indianapolis News.

ODD CASE OF JEALOUSY

ONE of the oddest cases of jealousy ever recorded is found in the records of a suit for divorce filed in Newark, N. J. The rift in family affairs of Elias Cowan, according to testimony brought out, occurred from the fact that within 20 years Mrs. Cowan made more than $200,000, while the husband's earning capacity never advanced far over $40 per week.

He left her, she alleges, after several years in which he would not speak to her or her son. When they were married, Cowan was a tailor and earning $13 a week. This was not enough money to pay home expenses of two people and so Mrs. Cowan took in dressmaking. She was an energetic woman, business like too, and in a short time she was earning $50 a week and her husband had advanced to $20 a week.

About this time Cowan became jealous, not of his wife's beauty or practical spirit, but because she was earning more money than he was and so, in no uncertain way, was showing her superiority in contributing to the family exchequer. Then came the oddest chapter in the marital experiences of this pair. Cowan asked her pointblank to quit making more than he did, and she retorted that both could not live on the $20 which Cowan was making.

Soon Mrs. Cowan's dressmaking business prospered so that she hired four assistants and she sent her son to University. Then Mrs. Cowan branched into real estate and just coined money, for she was just as shrewd dealing in real estate as she had been in her dressmaking venture.

Her continued success only aroused the ire of her "better half." Every fresh speculation in real estate which redounded to the credit of Mrs. Cowan, only made Mr. Cowan the more heated. After she bought the apartment houses and made them yield handsome returns, Cowan became so angered he would not speak to his wife.

She sold one of her houses and to reconcile Cowan she gave him $10,000, it is alleged. Then he quit work and has not been living with her since. And so there stands revealed to the world one of the oddest chapters in matrimonial history ever recorded on the legal pages of an affair of the heart and home.

EXPRESSING HIS THANKS

ONE of the first things President Coolidge did after his election was assured was to thank the voters. It was a simple statement and was embodied in these words:

"It does not seem possible to me to make an adequate expression concerning the presidency of the United States. No other honor equals it; no other responsibility approaches it. When it is conferred by an overwhelming choice of the American people and vote of the electoral college, these are made all the greater.

"I can only express my simple thanks to all those who have contributed to this result, and plainly acknowledge that it has been brought to pass through the work of a Divine Providence, of which I am but one instrument. Such powers as I have I dedicate to the service of all my country and of all my countrymen.

"In the performance of the duties of my office I cannot ask for anything more than the sympathetic consideration which my fellow Americans have always bestowed upon me. I have no appeal except to the common sense of all the people. I have no pledge except to serve them. I have no object except to promote their welfare."

WOMEN IN POLITICS

Two women governors and at least one congresswoman were elected. Mrs. Ferguson of Texas succeeded her husband as governor and Mrs. Ross succeeded her husband, in like manner, in Wyoming. "Ma" Ferguson has pledged herself to promote the cause of education from the rural schools to the university. Mrs. Ross revealed the canny instincts of a true politician. She refused to issue any flamboyant statements regarding her victory. She wants to be certain of election before she makes any kind of a statement.

In the east Mrs. Norton, who is the wife of a Jersey City business man, was elected to congress on a "light wines and beer" platform. By the way, this kind of a platform fell flat in Minnesota where a candidate for senate on such platform never even got started, polling but a handful of votes.

A TREMENDOUS vote was polled in the national election and shows that the campaign to get people out to vote was successful. In this, the women are assured a large part in attaining the end desired. The women of Minnesota were especially intense in their desires and appeals to get men and women to the polling places.

THE farmer who shot down a little band of children celebrating Halloween with pranks now faces a charge of third degree murder.

LA FOLLETTE, who started out to carry the West, brought home only the electors of one state, his home commonwealth of Wisconsin.

PEOPLE did not take kindly to the state amendment for a public elevator and it appears to have lost in the tide of ballots.

SOCIETY girls of an election precinct in St. Paul face charges, as it is asserted that tallying was started before the polls closed.

IF there's a time when an adding machine demonstrates its worth, it's when the election returns come pouring in.

THERE is a chilly touch in the air, and snow flurries seem imminent. It all makes good weather for shooting ducks.

AS returns come in, Congressman Harold Knutson is increasing his lead over his competitor, S. C. Shipstead.

WINNIPEG is reported blanketed with four inches of snow.

Here's Graphic Story
of Boudoir Tragedy

The room was in a state of fearful disorder. Cupboards had been opened and their contents scattered here and there in the utmost confusion, says London Answers. Dresses and coats had been torn from their hooks and lay in crumpled heaps on the floor. Everywhere chaos reigned.

At first sight the room appeared empty, but through the gloom in one far corner a figure was discernible—the figure of a woman.

There she crouched, despair writ large on her beautiful face, the light of agony in her eyes. Her long black hair streamed loose over her shoulders and her face was flushed. Her whole attitude was that of a woman driven to desperation, of one who had received some dreadful injury and knew not which way to turn.

At last anger got the better of her. She drew herself erect with a gesture of indignation. Stretching her arms out she cried aloud:

"I cannot stand any more! It is already too much! I was so proud of you, and you have repaid my pride with torture!"

And with an imperious gesture she ripped the little dancing shoe from her foot and flung it from her.

Most Powerful Portable Radio Broadcasts from Federal-Knight

WJAZ, Chicago, Tests Broadcasting From Many Points Near Midwestern Metropolis in Effort to Locate Ideal Site.

A veritable novelty in the radio world, a feature which has startled tens of millions within the broadcasting radius of Chicago, has been the portable radio broadcasting apparatus of the Zenith Radio Corporation, mounted on a Federal-Knight truck.

This organization, which recently took over the Edgewater Beach Corporation broadcasting outfit, and is transmitting its programs under the well known code, WJAZ, famous the world over as the station which talked to Donald McMillan, when this Arctic explorer was within 11 degrees of the North Pole, and has also been heard as far distant as Australia.

The portable, or automobile radio, which is carried about on the Federal-Knight truck, was built by Eugene F. McDonald, Jr.,

of the Zenith Radio Corporation for the purpose of locating and testing out the best site for the powerful broadcasting station in the vicinity of Chicago. When this place is found the Zenith Corporation plans to erect one of the finest stations in the world.

Loaded on the Federal-Knight truck are 12 storage batteries, each of 100-ampere hours, discharging at the 30-hour rate; a type No. 600 charger; one 350-volt "B" plate battery; two No. 80 chokes; two 1500-volt generators; one 250-volt generator; and tubes and microphones. The radio is of the Hartley type and has a 53-foot antenna mast.

Commenting on the work of the remarkable apparatus, Mr. R. H. G. Matthews, engineer of the Zenith Corporation, is loud in his praises of the performance of the Federal-Knight.

"It is the most remarkable piece of mechanism I have ever seen," he remarks. "We have covered 1600 miles already and our average gasoline consumption has been 16 miles to the gallon of gas. It is nothing for us to travel 175 miles to a location, stage a program and then move to the next stop. Our schedule is so laid out in advance that we are allotted just a certain number of hours to reach a certain location, in order not to disappoint audience and participants in our program.

"The most unusual feature of our tours is the smoothness of operation over all sorts of roads and this is a tremendous factor as we must be doubly careful with the delicate mechanisms that we carry. We haven't even had to adjust nuts and bolts on any part of the truck."

This traveling radio station has power enough to carry to points on the Atlantic seaboard and has been heard as far distant as Portland, Ore. The great interest that business men have taken in this radio station is another indication of the recognition that has been accorded to the motor truck as an economical and efficient means of transportation.

500,000 YEARS OF MAN SHOWN BY SPECIMENS

beast. There are pieces of flint indicating use by man.

The next period is that of 400,000 years ago, and specimens obtained of this are large cleavers of flint without handles, positive of use by man.

The neanderthal period was 100,000 years ago, of which there are scrapers and points in the collection.

"It is generally conceded by paleontologists," said Pond, "that this form of man absolutely disappeared."

The next period is that of the neolithic—the aurganacian period, 75,000 years ago. Other specimens of this period are a skeleton, showing man as he is now, proof that the resemblance of the beast in man was gone. Of this period there is also a game stone—a boulder with little holes, in which, it is believed, small stones were thrown, as in present day games.

Illustrating the next or soluterean period, there are some flint specimens, as few bone pieces remain. Three stages of this period are shown clearly.

The Stone Age

Of the magdalenian period, before mentioned, besides the 36 valuable carvings, are fine bone specimens—a harpoon head, bone needle and others—partly fossilized. After this period comes the well known neolithic (stone age), period some 16,000 years ago and specimens of this age are axes from France, England and pieces which were used by the Swiss cave dwellers. There is also pottery, pottery making implements, much as those used today, and the more detailed implements. There are arrow heads almost exactly like those used by American Indians.

The bronze age followed in the comparatively recent time of 8,000 to 10,000 years ago—just yesterday, considered scientifically. Of this period Beloit college has clay pottery, bronze implements, and tools used in weaving.

'NORTHWESTERN'

Really "Better Gasoline"

Not just "another gas." Northwestern Gasoline is especially prepared to produce the most efficient, least harmful combustible mixture for your car. The firing of your motor is really an infinite number of carefully timed chemical explosions, taking place within metal walls. The heat and power generated are tremendous. It is vitally important for you, as a prudent car-owner, to be sure not only that you are getting adequate power, but also that the ingredients you explode in your car will not injure the metal moving parts of your motor by corrosion or by leaving injurious deposits. Drop for drop, "Northwestern" is a better gasoline. That is why more of it is being used every day!

TWO BIG GAMES BOOKED IN EAST RED PEPPER FOR COLDS IN CHEST

HARVARD MEETS PRINCETON AND LEHIGH-HOLY CROSS AS HEADLINERS

New York, Nov. 6.—Harvard vs. Princeton and Lehigh vs. Holy Cross are two of the big eastern gridiron battles for this Saturday.

The Crimson vs. Tiger game is the first of the annual clashes between the "big three."

Lehigh is so far undefeated, but may meet a tartar in the strong Holy Cross aggregation.

Rutgers, so far undefeated, may be upset by Lafayette. Penn State is carded with Carnegie, with the former slated to win, as the team has developed in recent games.

Boston college is on with Marquette. The farmer is given a chance now to win, as the latter lost a game last week to Creighton of Omaha, it being Marquette's first defeat in three years.

Yale takes on a practice affair in Maryland, the Elis working up towards their battles in the big three.

Cornell, now in the role of a com-back after defeating Columbia last week, is on with Susquehanna.

Syracuse entertains the West Virginia Wesleyan, while the Haskell Indians will be at Brown.

Pennsylvania, one of the outstanding teams of the east now, meets Georgetown as a preliminary to the two big games to follow with Cornell and Penn State.

The Army tackles the University of Florida.

Ease your tight, aching chest. Stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the cold remedy that brings quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers, and when heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints relief comes at once.

The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering from a cold, rheumatism, backache, stiff neck or sore muscles, just get a jar of Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known.—Advt.

MEN AND WOMEN Who Know Force-Tor ic

—who have tried it in their individual cases of debility, cannot express themselves too strongly in its favor. Their praise is due not only to its invigorating properties but to its general beneficial effects in promoting the functional activity of the principal organs of the body.

To all who are pale, weak and weary, reduced in mind and body, languid and purposeless, thin and emaciated, nervous and irritable, lacking in appetite, troubled with indigestion, and devoid of interest, we also recommend this wonderful revitalizing and reconstructive tonic.

Most Powerful Portable Radio Broadcasts from Federal-Knight

WJAZ, Chicago, Tests Broadcasting From Many Points Near Midwestern Metropolis in Effort to Locate Ideal Site.

A veritable novelty in the radio world, a feature which has startled tens of millions within the broadcasting radius of Chicago, has been the portable radio broadcasting apparatus of the Zenith Radio Corporation, mounted on a Federal-Knight truck.

This organization, which recently took over the Edgewater Beach Corporation broadcasting outfit, and is transmitting its programs under the well known code, WJAZ, famous the world over as the station which talked to Donald McMillan, when this Arctic explorer was within 14 degrees of the North Pole, and has also been heard as far distant as Australia.

The portable, or automobile radio, which is carried about on the Federal-Knight truck, was built by Eugene F. McDonald, Jr.,

of the Zenith Radio Corporation for the purpose of locating and testing out the best site for the powerful broadcasting station in the vicinity of Chicago. When this place is found the Zenith Corporation plans to erect one of the finest stations in the world.

Loaded on the Federal-Knight truck are 12 storage batteries, each of 100-ampere hours, discharging at the 30-hour rate; a type No. 600 charger; one 350-volt "B" plate battery; two No. 80 chokes; two 1500-volt generators; one 250-volt generator; and tubes and microphones. The radio is of the Hartley type and has a 53-foot antenna mast.

Commenting on the work of the remarkable apparatus, Mr. R. H. G. Matthews, engineer of the Zenith Corporation, is loud in his praises of the performance of the Federal-Knight.

"It is the most remarkable piece of mechanism I have ever seen," he remarks. "We have covered 1600 miles already and our average gasoline consumption has been 16 miles to the gallon of gas. It is nothing for us to travel 175 miles to a location, stage a program and then move to the next stop. Our schedule is so laid out in advance that we are allotted just a certain number of hours to reach a certain location, in order not to disappoint audience and participants in our program.

"The most unusual feature of our tours is the smoothness of operation over all sorts of roads and this is a tremendous factor as we must be doubly careful with the delicate mechanisms that we carry. We haven't even had to adjust nuts and bolts on any part of the truck."

This traveling radio station has power enough to carry to points on the Atlantic seaboard and has been heard as far distant as Portland, Ore. The great interest that business men have taken in this radio station is another indication of the recognition that has been accorded to the motor truck as an economical and efficient means of transportation.

500,000 YEARS OF MAN SHOWN BY SPECIMENS

beast. There are pieces of flint indicating use by man.

The next period is that of 400,000 years ago, and specimens obtained of this are large cleavers of flint without handles, positive of use by man.

The neanderthal period was 100,000 years ago, of which there are scrapers and points in the collection.

"It is generally conceded by paleontologists," said Pond, "that this form of man absolutely disappeared."

The next period is that of the neolithic—the agricultural period, 75,000 years ago. Other specimens of this period are a skeleton, showing man as he is now, proof that the resemblance of the beast in man was gone. Of this period there is also a game stone—a boulder with little holes, in which, it is believed, small stones were thrown, as in present day games.

Illustrating the next or soluterean period, there are some flint specimens, as few bone pieces remain. Three stages of this period are shown clearly.

The Stone Age

Of the magdalenian period, before mentioned, besides the 36 valuable carvings, are fine bone specimens—a harpoon head, bone needle and others—partly fossilized. After this period comes the well known neolithic (stone age), period some 16,000 years ago and specimens of this age are axes from France, England and pieces which were used by the Swiss cave dwellers. There is also pottery, pottery making implements, much as those used today, and the more detailed implements. There are arrow heads almost exactly like those used by American Indians.

The bronze age followed in the comparatively recent time of 8,000 to 10,000 years ago—just yesterday, considered scientifically. Of this period Beloit college has clay pottery, bronze implements, and tools used in weaving.

'NORTHWESTERN'

Really "Better Gasoline"

Not just "another gas." Northwestern Gasoline is especially prepared to produce the most efficient, least harmful combustible mixture for your car. The firing of your motor is really an infinite number of carefully timed chemical explosions, taking place within metal walls. The heat and power generated are tremendous. It is vitally important for you, as a prudent car-owner, to be sure not only that you are getting adequate power, but also that the ingredients you explode in your car will not injure the metal moving parts of your motor by corrosion or by leaving injurious deposits. Drop for drop, "Northwestern" is a better gasoline. That is why more of it is being used every day! (NW-303)

(By United Press)

Washington, Nov. 6.—Calvin Coolidge of Vermont became twenty-ninth President of the United States through the death of his predecessor and was nominated in his own right by the Cleveland Convention.

His accession to the Presidency was the capstone of a long life of public service, that includes the steps of city councillor, clerk of courts, mayor, state representative, state senator, president of state senate, lieutenant governor and vice-president.

All these offices except the last were held by him in his adopted town of Northampton and in his adopted state of Massachusetts. To him Massachusetts is home, but his heart still turns to the hills of Vermont where he lived as a boy.

Calvin Coolidge, significantly enough to those who read things in terms of omens, was born on Fourth of July morning, 1872, in the tiny mountain hamlet of Plymouth, Vermont.

Behind his cradle stretched generations of a Puritan inheritance on one side and Protestant Irish on the other. The Coolidges trace their descent in the United States from a family of Coolidges who settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1630, though the line is not clear between them and John Coolidge, who settled Plymouth in 1780.

His mother, Victoria Josephine Moor sprung from that sturdy Irish stock which did much to transform the wildernesses of Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine to fertile fields in the late 1600's and early 1700's.

Thus, the heritage of Calvin Coolidge was English-Irish. The household into which he was born was of the purest New England type, notable for its frugality, its God-fearing devotion to principles of conduct and religion, sheltered, back in that mountain nook, from the relaxation that tainted the same heritage of families in the more populous Massachusetts lowlands.

The house in which Calvin Coolidge was born was a tiny cottage, the back room of his father's store. The event was unattended by doctors, members of the family alone officiating. Plymouth when Calvin Coolidge was born, was much the same as it is now. In 1872, there were five or six houses, barns, a store, a church, a district school and a cheese factory. Today, there is one more house. The village was and is 12 miles from the nearest railroad, situated among boulder strewn fields that nestled beneath a population of ten thousand.

The population then as today were engaged in the serious business of wrestling a living from the unpropitious circumstances in which they found themselves. Few pleasures or conveniences were available or desired. Such as they were, however, could have been provided by the boy's father, for he was a man of importance. He had then and has since served in both the assembly and senate of his state, been constable, moderator, and held other public offices. Primarily, however, he was a farmer.

Boyhood of Coolidge

In this atmosphere of austerity and the strictly business side of living, Calvin Coolidge was reared. The boy was not strong or active despite the inheritance of the big bony frame of his forefathers. All his life this circumstance kept him from playing that part among the games of childhood and youth that other boys played. Evidence is that Calvin was more serious than average. This is ascribed to the utter simplicity and almost monastic severity of his home life. Calvin had certain boyish chores to do and he did them without question.

"I never had to tell him to do a thing twice," his father once said. A visitor to the Coolidge household recalls one night about 2 a. m., that she heard a noise downstairs and descended, thinking someone ill. There she found in the dark a small boy. "I forgot to bring in the wood," said Calvin. "I'm going to get it now."

The boyhood and early youth of Calvin were spent in the routine of the farm and going to the district school. As he exhausted the capacity of the village school teacher he went to Black River Academy at Ludlow, 12 miles west.

In 1890, Calvin went down to Amherst to enter, but a spell of sickness forced him to abandon the project and he returned home. Rather than lose the year, however, after he had recovered he went to St. Johnsbury Academy and pursued his studies.

Amherst claimed him in 1891, and here he spent the next four years. He took no part in athletics "except to hold stakes," as he once said. His bent led him into debating. It was through his skill as a debater that he eventually obtained recognition. An immediate consequence of this emergence was his being sought by the Greek Letter Societies. He joined the Phi Gamma Delta, which his son, John Coolidge, has now likewise joined.

His two collegiate triumphs were the winning of a prize in intercollegiate competition with an essay entitled "Principles of the American Revolution," and his selection to deliver the class oration at commencement.

Turned loose on the world, young Coolidge did what many college graduates do—go home to think it over. He returned to the farm and took stock of his assets. He had a cultural education, but no specialty.

Finally one day, he went to his father and asked him if he wanted him to stay on the farm. He decided to study law. An opportunity to read law in a Northampton office came to him through his commencement day oration. Judge Henry A. Field, of Hammon & Field, lawyers, in Northampton, heard the address and offered him the position. Col. Coolidge apparently told him to follow his own desires, for Calvin went to Northampton and has made it his home ever since.

For two years, Coolidge studied diligently with his Blackstone, and June 29, 1897, he was admitted to the bar, a full-fledged lawyer. He hung out his shingle and went it alone. His former employers helped him along, but Coolidge got out and rustled business for himself and ultimately obtained an income.

Short of Funds

An interesting sidelight on these years was shed last summer by his father when the President returned to Plymouth for a vacation. The old man was proud of the regularity of his son's annual visits, but admitted that he did not see Cal for a few years after he left home for Northampton. Asked why, he replied:

"Well, I don't think he had the money for railroad fare."

Coolidge labored diligently at his small practice. He became known as the poor man's lawyer. The chance to enter politics came to him in 1899. He had naturally inherited his father's Vermont republicanism. Likewise, he had been made a member of the republican city committee of Northampton. In 1899, he stood for city councilman and was elected, serving two terms in the post. James Lucey, his cobbler friend, helped him. The city solicitorship becoming vacant at the end of his second term, he ran for that and was elected. He went through the political treadmill of the city, holding office as examiner of titles and clerk of courts, ultimately becoming republican city chairman.

Coolidge was rooming with a steward of the Clark School for the Deaf, located at Northampton, at which Grace A. Goodhue of Burlington, Vermont, a graduate of the University of Vermont and daughter of a steamboat inspector, was a teacher. One night Miss Goodhue came to the house for dinner and the downfall of

Coolidge was complete. They were married at Burlington, October 4, 1905. Returning to Northampton, they occupied first an apartment and then half of a double house on Massasoit Avenue, the house to which this day Coolidge looks as "home."

After the wedding, Coolidge again looked to his political fences. He was growing in the favor of the political sachems of the region. The opportunity came to run for a seat on the school board and Coolidge announced his candidacy, two months after he was married.

His First Defeat

He was defeated by his democratic opponent, the first time he ever took the count in the political ring. Nothing daunted, he went back to his law practice and the following year ran for the State legislature.

During the campaign for this post, Coolidge first exhibited a trait which brought him under fire in the campaign just ended—the refusal to be drawn out or smoked out by his opponents. His democratic opponent in his first campaign for the assembly sought to get him into a debate, but Coolidge ignored him, and won by a majority of 63 votes.

He went up to Boston armed with a letter to the speaker, John N. Cole, from his friend, Richard W. Irwin. The letter said of Coolidge:

"Like a singed cat, he is better than he looks."

Coolidge was assigned to the Mercantile Affairs committee and throughout the session he paid strict attention to business. He made only one short speech. Next year, he was re-elected, this time getting on the important Judiciary and Banking committees.

At the end of two years in the assembly and at the close of 1908, Coolidge was automatically retired by an unwritten law which said no member

(By United Press)

Washington, Nov. 6.—Calvin Coolidge of Vermont became twenty-ninth President of the United States through the death of his predecessor and was nominated in his own right by the Cleveland Convention.

His accession to the Presidency was the capstone of a long life of public service, that includes the steps of city councillor, clerk of courts, mayor, state representative, state senator, president of state senate, lieutenant governor and vice-president.

All these offices except the last were held by him in his adopted town of Northampton and in his adopted state of Massachusetts. To him Massachusetts is home, but his heart still turns to the hills of Vermont where he lived as a boy.

Calvin Coolidge, significantly enough to those who read things in terms of omens, was born on Fourth of July morning, 1872, in the tiny mountain hamlet of Plymouth, Vermont.

Behind his cradle stretched generations of a Puritan inheritance on one side and Protestant Irish on the other. The Coolidges trace their descent in the United States from a family of Coolidges who settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1630, though the line is not clear between them and John Coolidge, who settled Plymouth in 1780.

His mother, Victoria Josephine Moor sprung from that sturdy Irish stock which did much to transform the wildernesses of Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine to fertile fields in the late 1600's and early 1700's.

Thus, the heritage of Calvin Coolidge was English-Irish. The household into which he was born was of the purest New England type, notable for its frugality, its God-fearing devotion to principles of conduct and religion, sheltered, back in that mountain nook, from the relaxation that tainted the same heritage of families in the more populous Massachusetts lowlands.

The house in which Calvin Coolidge was born was a tiny cottage, the back room of his father's store. The event was unattended by doctors, members of the family alone officiating. Plymouth when Calvin Coolidge was born, was much the same as it is now. In 1872, there were five or six houses, barns, a store, a church, a district school and a cheese factory. Today, there is one more house. The village was and is 12 miles from the nearest railroad, situated among boulder strewn fields that nestled beneath a ring of eternal hills.

The population then as today were engaged in the serious business of wrestling a living from the unpropitious circumstances in which they found themselves. Few pleasures or conveniences were available or desired. Such as they were, however, could have been provided by the boy's father, for he was a man of importance. He had then and has since served in both the assembly and senate of his state, been constable, moderator, and held other public offices. Primarily, however, he was a farmer.

Boyhood of Coolidge

In this atmosphere of austerity and the strictly business side of living, Calvin Coolidge was reared. The boy was not strong or active despite the inheritance of the big bony frame of his forefathers. All his life this circumstance kept him from playing that part among the games of childhood and youth that other boys played. Evidence is that Calvin was more serious than average. This is ascribed to the utter simplicity and almost monastic severity of his boyhood life. Calvin had certain boyish chores to do and he did them without question.

"I never had to tell him to do a thing twice," his father once said. A visitor to the Coolidge household recalls one night about 2 a. m., that she heard a noise downstairs and descended, thinking someone ill. There she found in the dark a small boy. "I forgot to bring in the wood," said Calvin. "I'm going to get it now."

The boyhood and early youth of Calvin were spent in the routine of the farm and going to the district school. As he exhausted the capacity of the village school teacher he went to Black River Academy at Ludlow, 12 miles west.

In 1890, Calvin went down to Amherst to enter, but a spell of sickness forced him to abandon the project and he returned home. Rather than lose the year, however, after he had recovered he went to St. Johnsbury Academy and pursued his studies.

Amherst claimed him in 1891, and here he spent the next four years. He took no part in athletics "except to hold stakes," as he once said. His bent led him into debating. It was through his skill as a debater that he eventually obtained recognition. An immediate consequence of this emergence was his being sought by the Greek Letter Societies. He joined the Phi Gamma Delta, which his son, John Coolidge, has now likewise joined.

His two collegiate triumphs were the winning of a prize in intercollegiate competition with an essay entitled "Principles of the American Revolution," and his selection to deliver the class oration at commencement.

Turned loose on the world, young Coolidge did what many college graduates do—go home to think it over. He returned to the farm and took stock of his assets. He had a cultural education, but no specialty.

Finally one day, he went to his father and asked him if he wanted him to stay on the farm. He decided to study law. An opportunity to read law in a Northampton office came to him through his commencement day oration. Judge Henry A. Field, of Hammon & Field, lawyers, in Northampton, heard the address and offered him the position. Col. Coolidge apparently told him to follow his own desires, for Calvin went to Northampton and has made it his home ever since.

For two years, Coolidge studied diligently with his Blackstone, and June 29, 1897, he was admitted to the bar, a full-fledged lawyer. He hung out his shingle and went it alone. His former employers helped him along, but Coolidge got out and rustled business for himself and ultimately obtained an income.

Short of Funds

An interesting sidelight on these years was shed last summer by his father when the President returned to Plymouth for a vacation. The old man was proud of the regularity of his son's annual visits, but admitted that he did not see Cal for a few years after he left home for Northampton. Asked why, he replied:

"Well, I don't think he had the money for railroad fare."

Coolidge labored diligently at his small practice. He became known as the poor man's lawyer. The chance to enter politics came to him in 1899. He had naturally inherited his father's Vermont republicanism. Likewise, he had been made a member of the republican city committee of Northampton. In 1899, he stood for city councilman and was elected, serving two terms in the post. James Lucey, his cobbler friend, helped him. The city solicitorship becoming vacant at the end of his second term, he ran for that and was elected. He went through the political treadmill of the city, holding office as examiner of titles and clerk of courts, ultimately becoming republican city chairman.

Coolidge was rooming with a steward of the Clark School for the Deaf, located at Northampton, at which Grace A. Goodhue of Burlington, Vermont, a graduate of the University of Vermont and daughter of a steamboat inspector, was a teacher. One night Miss Goodhue came to the house for dinner and the downfall of

Coolidge was complete. They were married at Burlington, October 4, 1905. Returning to Northampton, they occupied first an apartment and then half of a double house on Massachusetts Avenue, the house to which this day Coolidge looks as "home."

After the wedding, Coolidge again looked to his political fences. He was growing in the favor of the political sachems of the region. The opportunity came to run for a seat on the school board and Coolidge announced his candidacy, two months after he was married.

His First Defeat

He was defeated by his democratic opponent, the first time he ever took the count in the political ring. Nothing daunted, he went back to his law practice and the following year ran for the State legislature.

During the campaign for this post, Coolidge first exhibited a trait which brought him under fire in the campaign just ended—the refusal to be drawn out or smoked out by his opponents. His democratic opponent in his first campaign for the assembly sought to get him into a debate, but Coolidge ignored him, and won by a majority of 63 votes.

He went up to Boston armed with a letter to the speaker, John N. Cole, from his friend, Richard W. Irwin. The letter said of Coolidge:

"Like a singed cat, he is better than he looks."

Coolidge was assigned to the Mercantile Affairs committee and throughout the session he paid strict attention to business. He made only one short speech. Next year, he was re-elected, this time getting on the important Judiciary and Banking committees.

At the end of two years in the assembly and at the close of 1908, Coolidge was automatically retired by an unwritten law which said no member

R. K. DOE SPEAKS AT LIONS CLUB

Naturalization Officer Says Quarter Million Annually Come Into United States

CITIZENSHIP TESTS MADE

Up Until 1906 Government Made Practically No Effort to Examine Fitness of Applicants

A quarter of a million aliens are coming into the United States annually, all of whom hope to become citizens of this country. R. K. Doe, naturalization officer, told the Brainerd Lions club at its weekly luncheon Wednesday evening. Mr. Doe was in the city in charge of the examination of twenty-six aliens seeking citizenship at the present term of the district court.

Up to the year 1906 practically no attempt was made to ascertain whether or not a person desiring citizenship was really eligible for that important trust, said the speaker. No matter how little conception he had of what citizenship in this country means, the alien could easily become naturalized if he could pay the small registration fee, and could vote even though he hardly understood the language and customs of the United States. Mr. Doe stated that he was born in Europe, coming to this country when a young man, and that he gained his citizenship in this manner.

Since that time, America has advanced rapidly in its citizenship laws because the country came to realize that citizenship is a great responsibility and that it requires proper qualification on the part of the alien before he is entitled to its rights.

Everyone should take a deep interest in politics, asserted Mr. Doe, but everyone should remember that first he was a citizen of this country before he was a Republican, Democrat, or Farmer-Labor supporter and that each citizen owes it to our government to place its welfare ahead of any party obligations.

"I was distressed with the evident hatred that was exhibited in this election," said Mr. Doe, "Toward those who held different political views. This is not the tolerance that the United States is supposed to foster, and gives aliens and new citizens the wrong impressions of our great country."

"The fundamental principle upon which all good government is based is tolerance," asserted Mr. Doe, who plead for tolerance toward the aliens coming to cast their lot with the United States. These aliens come to our country from a homeland that lacks tolerance, because they are given to understand that they will find that desirable quality, together with prosperity and happiness, in America.

Mr. Doe made a strong plea for the citizen to take a deeper interest in those aliens who are applying for naturalization. He said that in the eighteen years that he has been in his present work, only three persons have come to him concerning the desirability of admitting an applicant to citizenship.

All applicant's names are posted at the clerk of court's office in plenty of time previous to the granting of their papers, so that the public may know who are asking for equal rights of citizenship with the native-born, and may decide whether the applicants are desirable timber. Yet only three citizens in eighteen years have exhibited an interest in this matter, said Mr. Doe, and he asked that more interest be exhibited in applicants, to learn if they are of the good moral character required for citizenship, and if they expect to uphold the constitution of the United States and the laws of this country.

Such an interest would not only bring in a higher type of new citizen, but would make the present citizens better stockholders in the government of this country, concluded the speaker.

Why Not Select The Christmas Doll Now? Have You Seen Our Display?

We have made a very early display of Christmas dolls. We have done this because women like to purchase them early and dress them before the Christmas rush. Or, should you wish to take advantage of the early selection we will lay it aside until you wish it.

And the Doll Buggies

Already we have sold and laid aside pretty doll buggies selected by those who wished to be sure to have the kinds they wanted. Our windows are most interesting to those who wish to select early.

R. K. DOE SPEAKS AT LIONS CLUB

Naturalization Officer Says Quarter Million Annually Come Into United States

CITIZENSHIP TESTS MADE

Up Until 1906 Government Made Practically No Effort to Examine Fitness of Applicants

A quarter of a million aliens are coming into the United States annually, all of whom hope to become citizens of this country. R. K. Doe, naturalization officer, told the Brainerd Lions club at its weekly luncheon Wednesday evening. Mr. Doe was in the city in charge of the examination of twenty-six aliens seeking citizenship at the present term of the district court.

Up to the year 1906 practically no attempt was made to ascertain whether or not a person desiring citizenship was really eligible for that important trust, said the speaker. No matter how little conception he had of what citizenship in this country means, the alien could easily become naturalized if he could pay the small registration fee, and could vote even though he hardly understood the language and customs of the United States. Mr. Doe stated that he was born in Europe, coming to this country when a young man, and that he gained his citizenship in this manner.

Since that time, America has advanced rapidly in its citizenship laws because the country came to realize that citizenship is a great responsibility and that it requires proper qualification on the part of the alien before he is entitled to its rights.

Everyone should take a deep interest in politics, asserted Mr. Doe, but everyone should remember that first he was a citizen of this country before he was a Republican, Democrat, or Farmer-Labor supporter and that each citizen owes it to our government to place its welfare ahead of any party obligations.

"I was distressed with the evident hatred that was exhibited in this election," said Mr. Doe, "toward those who held different political views. This is not the tolerance that the United States is supposed to foster, and gives aliens and new citizens the wrong impressions of our great country."

"The fundamental principle upon which all good government is based is tolerance," asserted Mr. Doe, who plead for tolerance toward the aliens coming to cast their lot with the United States. These aliens come to our country from a homeland that lacks tolerance, because they are given to understand that they will find that desirable quality, together with prosperity and happiness, in America.

Mr. Doe made a strong plea for the citizen to take a deeper interest in those aliens who are applying for naturalization. He said that in the eighteen years that he has been in his present work, only three persons have come to him concerning the desirability of admitting an applicant to citizenship.

All applicant's names are posted at the clerk of court's office in plenty of time previous to the granting of their papers, so that the public may know who are asking for equal rights of citizenship with the native-born, and may decide whether the applicants are desirable timber. Yet only three citizens in eighteen years have exhibited an interest in this matter, said Mr. Doe, and he asked that more interest be exhibited in applicants, to learn if they are of the good moral character required for citizenship, and if they expect to uphold the constitution of the United States and the laws of this country.

Such an interest would not only bring in a higher type of new citizen, but would make the present citizens better stockholders in the government of this country, concluded the speaker.

GRANGE GREATEST HALFBACK—FARRELL

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Nov. 6.—Selection of an All-American football team has been made simpler for the experts by one position with the showing made by Red Grange, the star Illinois half-back in the Illinois-Michigan game. Grange not only clinched a place on every selection by scoring five touchdowns in a major game, but he performed an unheard of feat in scoring four touchdowns in the first period of a most important game.

"Grange, beyond all doubt, is one of the greatest players ever developed," Alonzo A. Stagg, coach of the University of Chicago eleven said in commenting on the game. "Considering that he went into that game a marked man and that Michigan had a whole year to devise some way of stopping him, his performance was amazing."

It was pointed out that Grange did just as much under heavy pressure as Babe Ruth could do by hitting four home runs in a world's series game. Ruth never did that. In fact the Babe's hitting in his world's series experience always has been very ordinary.

Knut Rockne, the Notre Dame coach, also is a great admirer of Grange. "I never heard of any player scoring four touchdowns in the first period of such an important game," Rockne said. "George Gipp once ran for six touchdowns in a game against Kalamazoo, but four of them were called back."

It is generally admitted in the west that Gipp, the late Notre Dame star, was the only player of recent years who would compare with the all-around ability of Grange. The Illinois junior can do everything that Gipp did just as well or a little better, but he can't kick, or at least he hasn't been called upon to kick.

While admitting that he is one of the greatest players in the country, many western critics claim that he has his great interference to thank. It is true that McIlwain and Britton gave him great interference in the Michigan game, but it will have to be admitted that every runner has to have interference. Grange got a good running start behind his interference, but he finished all his long runs alone and it always is the last few yards that are the hardest.

WIN

Ames, Ia., Nov. 6.—Iowa State college has high hopes of defeating the Gophers Saturday in the gridiron battle at Minneapolis.

The Ames scouts report that Iowa should score by use of passes and the students remembering the 29 to 17 game of last year hope to wipe out the defeat and register a win.

The students are going in a body, over 1,000 students are going to make the trip in a special train over the Minneapolis and St. Louis road. The special with the rosters and band will leave Ames Friday night going to Ft. Dodge. A parade will be staged at Ft. Dodge the special leaving there at 10:30.

Ames held light practice Tuesday night. The line under Coach Hauser practiced blocking, charging and pass defense.

Roberts and Galbraith are still under the head trainer, who stated Galbraith would be unable to play by Saturday. Roberts will undoubtedly recover.

The only work was dummy scrimmage against Minnesota plays.

Palm has fully recovered from his broken hand and will be able to start game. Palm showed well on both defense and carrying the ball in the Kan-Aggie game and being given first call at fullback.

Coach Willaman used two backfields last night on offensive play; Greenlee, trackman, was used at one half; N. Behm at the other; Palm, full, and J. Behm at quarter, Nave and Coe at ends. Coe due to good work Saturday is taking Bond's place at end.—St. Paul Daily News.

A FEW SPILLS

Calvin Coolidge

administration," and attacked his silence as a "gum-shoe campaign," but he triumphed.

Two years as mayor brought to an end, Coolidge took the next step and went to the State Senate. As a Senator, Coolidge identified himself with "liberal" legislation. He fought for an anti-monopoly bill and an anti-injunction bill. He was chairman of a joint legislative committee which settled a serious strike of mill-workers at Lawrence, Mass. At the end of his first term, he was re-elected.

In 1914, word reached Coolidge that the president of the Senate would not be a candidate for re-election. He got busy and assured himself of the votes necessary to be elected to the position without opposition in 1915.

His principal claim to fame during the occupancy of the chair was his championship of brevity. It was at this stage, too, that his conservatism developed. Where he had been a champion of reform legislation during his early legislative years, he now became convinced that administrations should be given time to catch up with legislation.

Stearns Enters the Picture

During 1916, his friends began to talk to him of the lieutenant governorship. It was about this time that Frank W. Stearns, Boston merchant and since then a lifelong friend and "angel" of Coolidge, came on the scene.

Stearns had been interested in a bill which brought him in contact with the Vermonters and he conceived the idea that as a fellow Amherst man he would like to see Coolidge advanced. Stearns organized a dinner of Amherst men, sprung his proposal to back Coolidge for lieutenant governor on the republican ticket, and got them to work in the primaries. Coolidge won in the primaries and was victoriously returned in the election.

For three years he sat in the State House as lieutenant governor. He lived in one room at the Adams House with Mrs. Coolidge, and worried along on a salary of $2,000 a year.

When Governor McCall decided to retire in 1918, Coolidge was the unopposed candidate of his party and he swept to victory in the fall of that year. He was inaugurated January 1, 1919.

Outstanding events during the first year of his administration were the welcome of the Yankee Division on its return from France, his welcome to President Wilson returning from Paris, and, finally, the great Boston police strike of September, 1919.

So much doubt has been cast upon the part Coolidge played in the strike and its settlement that historians alone will be able to say just what the facts are. The friends of Coolidge say he stood as an apostle of law and order. His critics say he shirked his duty, ran away from it, and then returned to take the credit for another man's courage.

The strike was precipitated on September 9, when two-thirds of the Boston police force struck following suspension of 19 of their number for alleged violation of an order not to join a union. Riots and looting followed the withdrawal of the police protection. Governor Coolidge hastened to Boston from the western part of the state where he had been addressing a meeting of the American Federation of Labor the night before.

Boston Police Strike

The Boston force at the time was under a special commission, dependent on the governor's office. Their head was a special police commissioner responsible to the governor.

Coolidge, though in town, with the situation hourly growing more menacing, refused to interfere with the police commissioner whose duty it was to handle the trouble. His position was that he refused to compromise the authority of the law.

All the night of the 9th, the disorders proceeded. Early on the morning of the 10th, the police commissioner appealed for state troops. Coolidge ordered the troops to report at once, declared martial law and issued a proclamation taking over command of the police. He ultimately brought order out of chaos.

It has been claimed that Mayor Peters of Boston, alarmed by the delay of the governor, ordered out the troops himself under an ancient law never before used, and that the governor followed his lead later. The democratic national committee sponsored this statement in the campaign just ended and offered $1,000 reward to any one disproving the statement. It was denied by Coolidge's friends and associates of the strike days.

The upshot of the strike was that Coolidge was established in the public mind as the apostle of law and order. Thousands of congratulatory messages were sent him, including one from President Wilson.

The elections followed shortly thereafter and Coolidge was re-elected governor by an enormous majority and inaugurated on January 9, 1920.

Meanwhile, the Presidential bee was buzzing, not with Coolidge, but with his ever-present friend, Stearns. Stearns and a little organization labored hard to stir up sentiment throughout New England for Coolidge and went to the 1920 convention with a bloc of votes that totaled 29 on the first ballot, and reached a high point of 32 on the second. The Harding landslide, however, wiped out the only chance Coolidge had—in a deadlock—before he got any further, but he secured second place.

At 9 p. m., the night after Harding was named, Wallace MacCamant of Oregon placed Calvin Coolidge in nomination. A stampede ensued and Coolidge was given the place. He was officially notified at Northampton, July 27.

Coolidge's contribution to the campaign was a tour of the border states. He spoke in Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina. Republican victories in Maryland and Tennessee were ascribed by his friends to his tour. Coolidge served out his term as governor and then returned to Northampton for a rest of two months before going to Washington for inauguration, March 4, 1921.

Once in Washington, Coolidge dropped into the inevitable obscurity of the vice-presidency. He sent his two sons to Mercersburg academy and took up his abode with Mrs. Coolidge at the New Willard. He did not make the popular presiding officer of the Senate that his predecessor, Tom Marshall, had been, but he ruled impartially.

He benefited by an innovation inaugurated by President Harding, who made a place in cabinet meetings for the Vice-President on the theory that he should know of the affairs of the nation the better to step into them if occasion called.

Coolidge Becomes President

On August 2, 1923, when President Harding died in a hotel room far away in San Francisco, Calvin Coolidge was home in the little two-story house of his father at Plymouth, taking his annual vacation in the atmosphere of his boyhood. He was not unprepared for what followed, for he had been advised of the president's illness. Coolidge retired as usual that night. Shortly after midnight, an automobile dashed up to the door and the occupant jumped out and pounded on the door. Col. John Coolidge put his head out of the window and heard that Harding had died and there was a telegram for the vice-president. He aroused the new president and his wife. They descended the stairs.

Telephone linemen cut a line in from the nearest phone at Plymouth Union, two miles away to the Coolidge house, and at 2:30 a. m., Coolidge talked with Secretary Hughes at Washington, who notified him it was his duty to take the oath of office at once and start for Washington.

Gravely turning away from the telephone to his father, he announced that he would take the oath at once and that his father, a notary, would administer it.

Then, in the dim flickering light of an oil lamp, in the presence of his wife, some neighbors, his stenographer and chauffeur, Calvin Coolidge held up his right hand before his father and swore to defend the constitution as twenty-ninth president of the United States at 2:47 a. m., August 3.

He embraced his wife and father, dictated a statement to the nation, expressing the hope that the late president's cabinet would serve him, and declaring his faith "that God will direct the destinies of the nation," and then retired.

Calvin Coolidge was the first man to be inaugurated President of the United States by his father. Some effort was made to cast doubt on the equality of the oath, but it never went far.

He started for Washington next day, and in the ensuing days went through the trying ordeal of the state funeral of the late president. He occupied his old suite at the Willard, held many conferences with his cabinet and refused all their resignations.

When the funeral was over, and Mrs. Harding had moved her effects from the Executive Mansion, the Coolidge family moved into the White House. The transfer of executive power had been effected with no disorder.

When he became president, Coolidge had 19 months and two days of his predecessor's term to complete. Many problems were piled high on the White House desk, chief among them settlement of the Pennsylvania hard coal strike. An inspection of the law convinced him it was a state matter and turned it over to Governor Pinchot.

His first major appointment was that of Campbell Bascom Slemph, ex-Congressman of Big Stone Gap, Va., a republican from a state of democrats, as his private secretary. There was a hue and cry over the choice because Slemph had been involved in charges of the sale of postmaster appointments, but the president ignored this.

Congress, which he addressed on December 6, had not been easy on President Harding, and it was no easier on Calvin Coolidge. The investigations into the oil scandal had just begun to get under way, and the bonus, tax and immigration questions were on the griddle. Coolidge from the first opposed the bonus, supported Secretary Mellon's tax plan, and opposed the Japanese exclusion clause in the immigration bill. On all of these he was overruled. Both houses passed the bonus over his veto; sent him a tax bill he did not care for, but which he signed because it was a measure of tax reduction, and dumped the international problem with Japan into his unwilling lap by writing the exclusion clause into the bill over his protest. Nevertheless he signed it, because Congress said it was what it wanted, and there was no legal grounds on which to veto it.

The investigations caused President Coolidge untold trouble. He personally entered them only through the production of telegrams sent to Edward B. McLean, Washington publisher, who was involved in the Fall money matter. These he declared were entirely innocent. But the Senatorial demand for the removal of Secretary of the Navy Denby put him to the test of loyalty. He stuck with Denby against the clamor for his ouster until Denby himself quit, with an expression of Mr. Coolidge's regret and praise of his services. With Attorney-General Daugherty it was different. Mr. Coolidge stood by him under the withering fire of the Senate Department of Justice committee, until the committee put him in the position of having to ask his attorney-general for legal advice on a matter which directly involved Daugherty.

With a regard for the proprieties, Mr. Coolidge asked Daugherty to step out to make way for some man who could give him advice from the point of view of one disinterested.

To the attorney-generalship he appointed an old Amherst classmate, Harlan F. Stone; to the Navy post, a California jurist, Curtis L. Wilbur.

The Logical Candidate

Meanwhile, Mr. Coolidge had become the logical candidate of his party for the 1924 elections. Senator Hiram Johnson made a bold stand against him for a while, but as the primaries returned Coolidge almost everywhere, Johnson was out of the picture. When the convention was held in June, Mr. Coolidge had almost all the votes corralled. Wisconsin and North Dakota alone held out against him. The president would not interfere with a free choice of his running-mate, and Brigadier-General Charles G. Dawes of Chicago was picked.

A crushing personal blow came to the president and his wife just a month after his nomination, when his youngest son, Calvin, Jr., died suddenly of blood poisoning contracted from an infected blister. All that medical science could offer to save his child was provided by the frantic parent, but to no avail. Calvin, Jr., died in Walter Reed Hospital, in Washington, July 1, 1924.

Returning to Washington from his son's funeral, the president applied himself to his speech of acceptance which he delivered on August 14, and the next day retired to Plymouth for a two weeks' rest. He came back to Washington refreshed and devoted himself for the remainder of the summer to his work in Washington. He refused to be drawn extensively into the campaign, but stayed close to Washington, making frequent speeches there, and one each at Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The president irked his opponents by his refusal to join in public debates from the stump on the Ku Klux Klan, League of Nations, "honesty in government." He contended he had silenced the League question in previous speeches, rested his position on the Klan on statements in behalf of religious toleration, and declared he would concede to no man greater zeal for honesty in government. There he stood. He maintained the position he took when first running for the Massachusetts assembly, of ignoring challenges.

party for the 1924 elections. Senator Hiram Johnson made a bold stand against him for a while, but as the primaries returned Coolidge almost everywhere, Johnson was out of the picture. When the convention was held in June, Mr. Coolidge had almost all the votes corralled. Wisconsin and North Dakota alone held out against him. The president would not interfere with a free choice of his running-mate, and Brigadier-General Charles G. Dawes of Chicago was picked.

A crushing personal blow came to the president and his wife just a month after his nomination, when his youngest son, Calvin, Jr., died suddenly of blood poisoning contracted from an infected blister. All that medical science could offer to save his child was provided by the frantic parent, but to no avail. Calvin, Jr., died in Walter Reed Hospital, in Washington, July 1, 1924.

Returning to Washington from his son's funeral, the president applied himself to his speech of acceptance which he delivered on August 14, and the next day retired to Plymouth for a two weeks' rest. He came back to Washington refreshed and devoted himself for the remainder of the summer to his work in Washington. He refused to be drawn extensively into the campaign, but stayed close to Washington, making frequent speeches there, and one each at Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The president irked his opponents by his refusal to join in public debates from the stump on the Ku Klux Klan, League of Nations, "honesty in government." He contended he had silenced the League question in previous speeches, rested his position on the Klan on statements in behalf of religious toleration, and declared he would concede to no man greater zeal for honesty in government. There he stood. He maintained the position he took when first running for the Massachusetts assembly, of ignoring challenges.

GRANGE GREATEST HALFBACK—FARRELL

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Nov. 6.—Selection of an All-American football team has been made simpler for the experts by one position with the showing made by Red Grange, the star Illinois half-back in the Illinois-Michigan game. Grange not only clinched a place on every selection by scoring five touchdowns in a major game, but he performed an unheard of feat in scoring four touchdowns in the first period of a most important game.

"Grange, beyond all doubt, is one of the greatest players ever developed," Alonzo A. Stagg, coach of the University of Chicago eleven said in commenting on the game. "Considering that he went into that game a marked man and that Michigan had a whole year to devise some way of stopping him, his performance was amazing."

It was pointed out that Grange did just as much under heavy pressure as Babe Ruth could do by hitting four home runs in a world's series game. Ruth never did that. In fact the Babe's hitting in his world's series experience always has been very ordinary.

Knute Rockne, the Notre Dame coach, also is a great admirer of Grange. "I never heard of any player scoring four touchdowns in the first period of such an important game," Rockne said. "George Gipp once ran for six touchdowns in a game against Kalamazoo, but four of them were called back."

It is generally admitted in the west that Gipp, the late Notre Dame star, was the only player of recent years who would compare with the all-around ability of Grange. The Illinois junior can do everything that Gipp did just as well or a little better, but he can't kick, or at least he hasn't been called upon to kick.

While admitting that he is one of the greatest players in the country, many western critics claim that he has his great interference to thank. It is true that McIlwain and Britton gave him great interference in the Michigan game, but it will have to be admitted that every runner has to have interference. Grange got a good running start behind his interference, but he finished all his long runs alone and it always is the last few yards that are the hardest.

BAND, FOLLOWERS, TO CHEER IOWA'S
STATE GRID MENSPECIAL TRAIN TO CARRY PLAYERS
AND FANS TO TWIN
CITIESCLAIMED THAT IOWA ELEVEN
LOOKS GOOD TO WIN

Ames, Ia., Nov. 6.—Iowa State college has high hopes of defeating the Gophers Saturday in the gridiron battle at Minnesota.

The Ames scouts report that Iowa should score by use of passes and the students remembering the 20 to 17 game of last year hope to wipe out the defeat and register a win.

The students are going in a body, over 1,000 students are going to make the trip in a special train over the Minneapolis and St. Louis road. The special with the rosters and band will leave Ames Friday night going to Ft. Dodge. A parade will be staged at Ft. Dodge the special leaving there at 10:30.

Ames held light practice Tuesday night. The line under Coach Hauser practiced blocking, charging and pass defense.

Roberts and Galbraith are still under the head trainer, who stated Galbraith would be unable to play by Saturday. Roberts will undoubtedly recover.

The only work was dummy scrimmage against Minnesota plays.

Palm has fully recovered from his broken hand and will be able to start game. Palm showed well on both defense and carrying the ball in the Kan-Aggie game and being given first call at fullback.

Coach Willaman used two backfields last night on offensive play; Greenlee, trackman, was used at one half; N. Behm at the other; Palm, full, and J. Behm at quarter, Nave and Coe at ends. Coe due to good work Saturday is taking Bond's place at end.—St. Paul Daily News.

Extracting Flower Essence

Perfume must be drawn from the bloom on the day that it is plucked. In 24 hours the delicate aroma is almost gone. Many flowers are required to produce small amounts of the perfume. It takes about two tons of violet blossoms, for instance, to make about two pounds of essence of violets.

administration," and attacked his silence as a "gum-shoe campaign," but he triumphed.

Two years as mayor brought to an end, Coolidge took the next step and went to the State Senate. As a Senator, Coolidge identified himself with "liberal" legislation. He fought for an anti-monopoly bill and an anti-injunction bill. He was chairman of a joint legislative committee which settled a serious strike of mill-workers at Lawrence, Mass. At the end of his first term, he was re-elected.

In 1914, word reached Coolidge that the president of the Senate would not be a candidate for re-election. He got busy and assured himself of the votes necessary to be elected to the position and was re-elected to the position without opposition in 1915.

His principal claim to fame during the occupancy of the chair was his championship of brevity. It was at this stage, too, that his conservatism developed. Where he had been a champion of reform legislation during his early legislative years, he now became convinced that administrations should be given time to catch up with legislation.

Stearns Enters the Picture

During 1916, his friends began to talk to him of the lieutenant governorship. It was about this time that Frank W. Stearns, Boston merchant and since then a lifelong friend and "angel" of Coolidge, came on the scene. Stearns had been interested in a bill which brought him in contact with the Vermonters and he conceived the idea that as a fellow Amherst man he would like to see Coolidge advanced.

Stearns organized a dinner of Amherst men, sprung his proposal to back Coolidge for lieutenant governor on the republican ticket, and got them to work in the primaries. Coolidge won in the primaries and was victoriously returned in the election.

For three years he sat in the State House as lieutenant governor. He lived in one room at the Adams House with Mrs. Coolidge, and worried along on a salary of $2,000 a year.

When Governor McCall decided to retire in 1918, Coolidge was the unopposed candidate of his party and he swept to victory in the fall of that year. He was inaugurated January 1, 1919.

Outstanding events during the first year of his administration were the welcome of the Yankee Division on its return from France, his welcome to President Wilson returning from Paris, and, finally, the great Boston police strike of September, 1919.

So much doubt has been cast upon the part Coolidge played in the strike and its settlement that historians alone will be able to say just what the facts are. The friends of Coolidge say he stood as an apostle of law and order. His critics say he shirked his duty, ran away from it, and then returned to take the credit for another man's courage.

The strike was precipitated on September 9, when two-thirds of the Boston police force struck following suspension of 19 of their number for alleged violation of an order not to join a union. Riots and looting followed the withdrawal of the police protection. Governor Coolidge hastened to Boston from the western part of the state where he had been addressing a meeting of the American Federation of Labor the night before.

Coolidge, though in town, with the situation hourly growing more menacing, refused to interfere with the police commissioner whose duty it was to handle the trouble. His position was that he refused to compromise the authority of the law.

All the night of the 9th, the disorders proceeded. Early on the morning of the 10th, the police commissioner appealed for state troops. Coolidge ordered the troops to report at once, declared martial law and issued a proclamation taking over command of the police. He ultimately brought order out of chaos.

It has been claimed that Mayor Peters of Boston, alarmed by the delay of the governor, ordered out the troops himself under an ancient law never before used, and that the governor followed his lead later. The democratic national committee sponsored this statement in the campaign just ended and offered $1,000 reward to any one disproving the statement. It was denied by Coolidge's friends and associates of the strike days.

The upshot of the strike was that Coolidge was established in the public mind as the apostle of law and order. Thousands of congratulatory messages were sent him, including one from President Wilson.

The elections followed shortly thereafter and Coolidge was re-elected governor by an enormous majority and inaugurated on January 9, 1920.

Meanwhile, the Presidential bee was buzzing, not with Coolidge, but with his ever-present friend, Stearns. Stearns and a little organization labored hard to stir up sentiment throughout New England for Coolidge and went to the 1920 convention with a bloc of votes that totaled 29 on the first ballot, and reached a high point of 32 on the second. The Harding landslide, however, wiped out the only chance Coolidge had—in a deadlock—before he got any further, but he secured second place.

At 9 p. m., the night after Harding was named, Wallace MacCamant of Oregon placed Calvin Coolidge in nomination. A stampede ensued and Coolidge was given the place. He was officially notified at Northampton, July 27.

Coolidge's contribution to the campaign was a tour of the border states. He spoke in Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina. Republican victories in Maryland and Tennessee were ascribed by his friends to his tour. Coolidge served out his term as governor and then returned to Northampton for a rest of two months before going to Washington for inauguration, March 4, 1921.

Once in Washington, Coolidge dropped into the inevitable obscurity of the vice-presidency. He sent his two sons to Mercersburg academy and took up his abode with Mrs. Coolidge at the New Willard. He did not make the popular presiding officer of the Senate that his predecessor, Tom Marshall, had been, but he ruled impartially.

He benefited by an innovation inaugurated by President Harding, who made a place in cabinet meetings for the Vice-President on the theory that he should know of the affairs of the nation the better to step into them if occasion called.

Coolidge Becomes President

On August 2, 1923, when President Harding died in a hotel room far away in San Francisco, Calvin Coolidge was home in the little two-story house of his father at Plymouth, taking his annual vacation in the atmosphere of his boyhood. He was not unprepared for what followed, for he had been advised of the president's illness. Coolidge retired as usual that night. Shortly after midnight, an automobile dashed up to the door and the occupant jumped out and pounded on the door. Col. John Coolidge put his head out of the window and heard that Harding had died and there was a telegram for the vice-president. He aroused the new president and his wife. They descended the stairs.

Telephone linemen cut a line in from the nearest phone at Plymouth Union, two miles away to the Coolidge house, and at 2:30 a. m., Coolidge talked with Secretary Hughes at Washington, who notified him it was his duty to take the oath of office at once and start for Washington.

Gravely turning away from the telephone to his father, he announced that he would take the oath at once and that his father, a notary, would administer it.

Then, in the dim flickering light of an oil lamp, in the presence of his wife, some neighbors, his stenographer and chauffeur, Calvin Coolidge held up his right hand before his father and swore to defend the constitution as twenty-ninth president of the United States at 2:47 a. m., August 3.

He embraced his wife and father, dictated a statement to the nation, expressing the hope that the late president's cabinet would serve him, and declaring his faith "that God will direct the destinies of the nation," and then retired.

Calvin Coolidge was the first man to be inaugurated President of the United States by his father. Some effort was made to cast doubt on the equality of the oath, but it never went far.

He started for Washington next day, and in the ensuing days went through the trying ordeal of the state funeral of the late president. He occupied his old suite at the Willard, held many conferences with his cabinet and refused all their resignations.

When the funeral was over, and Mrs. Harding had moved her effects from the Executive Mansion, the Coolidge family moved into the White House. The transfer of executive power had been effected with no disorder.

When he became president, Coolidge had 19 months and two days of his predecessor's term to complete. Many problems were piled high on the White House desk, chief among them settlement of the Pennsylvania hard coal strike. An inspection of the law convinced him it was a state matter and turned it over to Governor Pinchot.

His first major appointment was that of Campbell Bascom Slemph, ex-Congressman of Big Stone Gap, Va., a republican from a state of democrats, as his private secretary. There was a hue and cry over the choice because Slemph had been involved in charges of the sale of postmaster appointments, but the president ignored this.

Congress, which he addressed on December 6, had not been easy on President Harding, and it was no easier on Calvin Coolidge. The investigations into the oil scandal had just begun to get under way, and the bonus, tax and immigration questions were on the griddle. Coolidge from the first opposed the bonus, supported Secretary Mellon's tax plan, and opposed the Japanese exclusion clause in the immigration bill. On all of these he was overruled. Both houses passed the bonus over his veto; sent him a tax bill he did not care for, but which he signed because it was a measure of tax reduction, and dumped the international problem with Japan into his unwilling lap by writing the exclusion clause into the bill over his protest. Nevertheless he signed it, because Congress said it was what it wanted, and there was no legal grounds on which to veto it.

The investigations caused President Coolidge untold trouble. He personally entered them only through the production of telegrams sent to Edward B. McLean, Washington publisher, who was involved in the Fall money matter. These he declared were entirely innocent.

But the Senatorial demand for the removal of Secretary of the Navy Denby put him to the test of loyalty. He stuck with Denby against the clamor for his ouster until Denby himself quit, with an expression of Mr. Coolidge's regret and praise of his services. With Attorney-General Daugherty it was different. Mr. Coolidge stood by him under the withering fire of the Senate Department of Justice committee, until the committee put him in the position of having to ask his attorney-general for legal advice on a matter which directly involved Daugherty.

With a regard for the proprieties, Mr. Coolidge asked Daugherty to step out to make way for some man who could give him advice from the point of view of one disinterested.

To the attorney-generalship he appointed one of the ablest Amherst classmates, Harlan F. Stone; to the Navy post, a California jurist, Curtis L. Wilbur.

Meanwhile, Mr. Coolidge had become the logical candidate of his
